

My family has listened to KLOVE for several years. It has been my unhappy experience to tune to secular stations and be offended by what is offered there to the general public. In a society that is self-serving and becoming depraved it is my hope that others will also surf the dial and happen upon KLOVE where the message of hope and joy will be a salve to their ears and souls. KLOVE is a station that is funded solely by donors. The possibility of it being taken off the air, or so severely limited in scope of transmission would be yet another victory of the perishing world and its distortion of values over values that are eternal.
